

Jacqueline Hall is the Founder and Principal of Partners in Communication, a firm that provides expert advice in Public Affairs, Corporate Communications & Governance and Stakeholder Engagement. She has worked for global brands and national organisations, across several business sectors - Retail, Technology, Media, Environment, Biotech, Industry Groups, Energy, and NGOs. She has served two terms as a member of the Board of Governors and Guardians of the National Gallery of Ireland and previously served as President of the Public Relations Institute of Ireland. She has also served as a board member of Irish Water, Ervia, Fighting Blindness, and as a member of the Council of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce. She graduated from University College Dublin with a BA (Hons), History & History of Art, and holds additional qualifications from Technical University Dublin (Marketing Management), UCD Michael Smurfit Graduate Business School (Grad Dip in Corporate Governance), The Honourable Society of King's Inns (Advanced Dip in Data Protection Law/GDPR), and Trinity College Dublin (Grad Dip in Conflict & Dispute Resolution).